Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Annual Report of Program Activities, Vol. 5: National Cancer Institute Fiscal Year 1981 The mission of the Division of Extramural Activities is to plan and direct, in coordination with the other Divisions of the National Cancer Institute, a program in support of national and international cancer research and training through a system of grants and contracts. The role of the Dea relates to the peer review and financial management of the grants and the review activities of resource contracts. All grant applications must undergo dual review and critical assessment of their scientific merit, the ability of the investigator, the adequacy of available facilities, budget priorities, and the program relevance of the proposed work. This review is conducted by appropriate committees composed of outstanding scientists and other recognized authorities in the health sciences. The final part of the dual review of grants is conducted by the National Cancer Advisory Board, -a group of eminent scientists and lay people whose major interests are in cancer. The Office of the Director provides the leadership and direction to the Nci s peer review activities for grants, and proposes and institutes policies and procedures for achieving the Institute s missions. During fiscal year 1981, 3800 grant applications were referred to the National Cancer Institute. Of these, 474 were assigned to review committees under the Division of Extramural Activities and the rest received their initial review through the Division of Research Grant study sections. This involved the conduct of many site visits, the preparation of large numbers of summary statements of recommendations, site visit reports, and other material for review by both the initial review groups and the National Cancer Advisory...
